the sarah p. duke gardens annual report

The Sarah P. Duke Gardens has certainly come a long way. Opening in 1939, we began with a small staff, minimal resources, and facilities that were less than optimal. Seven decades later, we find ourselves hosting international garden competitions, initiating a cell phone visiting program, and hiring our first full-time director.

In light of these accomplishments, this year's annual report provides a snapshot of the Gardens as it has evolved from its humble beginnings into the beautiful and rich resource it is today.

3. Mary Biddle Duke, whose donation helped build the Terraces.
4. Sarah P. Duke, whose generosity created the first garden.

dear friends,

Since the first annual report of the Sarah P. Duke Gardens in 2002, the opening letter from the executive director carried the signature of Dr. Richard A. White. The recently opened Doris Duke Center welcomed our visitors and significant growth in staff, operations and funding

This organization has come a long way since the days, not all that long ago, when a much smaller staff (many of whom are still with us), with far fewer resources, operating out of unbelievably cramped and outdated facilities, provided the dedicated and professional service that continues to this day. It is truly an honor to be chosen to follow in the footsteps of Dr. White and all the staff, board members, volunteers, and friends whose vision, tireless efforts and support created and nurtured this inspiringly beautiful place over the past 70 years.

As the Gardens' first full-time director, I have an extraordinary opportunity at an auspicious time. We will continue to enhance our gardens, facilities, programs, and organizational capacity in accordance with our mission and vision, with one eye focused on the future and the other on the our unique character and heritage.

adult education

67 programs were offered in 2006 — 2007, with 1,382 participants.

The most popular fall event was the series of classes on digital photography, with 53 attendees over 5 sessions.

Favorite classes and programs included Perennials for Fall Gardens, Water Lilies of Duke Gardens, and workshops on Japanese embroidery and Winter Container Gardens.

Popular classes in the spring focused on irises, ikebana and plant propagation. Favorite programs included Native Plants as Ecological Art, The Japanese Tea Ceremony and Native Plants of the Piedmont.

The partnership with the Durham County Master Gardeners continues its success, with attendance growing. New locations to accommodate the participants are being sought.

children's programs

“Playwork” volunteers from Great Britain, Tanya Cook & Fran Morrison, spent three months interning. They worked on ideas for the children’s garden, visited hospital kids & created a “Nature Ranger” cart.

Native Tales, a book/CD teacher resource project was completed. The project, done in collaboration with the N.C. Botanic Garden, uses native plants to explore N.C. cultural and ecological history. A Mary Duke Biddle Foundation grant allowed the book/CD to be distributed to more than 500 4th grade teachers in the five Triangle counties.

The Magnolia Project, a partnership with Duke undergraduates, developed a summer community outreach program for middle school students.

The Nature of Art & the Art of Nature, a special workshop for elementary teachers connecting art and science, was conducted in conjunction with the Nasher Museum.

Healing and Hope through Science continues to bring science programming to hospitalized children at Duke and UNC hospitals.

blomquist garden

2006 — 2007 saw the Duke Gardens Plant Rescue team save over 800 specimens comprising 12 species from destruction by development. These plants are to be planted into the Blomquist Garden and represent a market value of almost $6,000.

Stefan Bloodworth, Michael Patrick and Jason Holmes attended the Cullowhee Native Plant Conference at Western Carolina University. The yearly conference focuses on native plant horticulture as well as conservation.

An informational brochure was published to educate the visiting public about the Church Endangered Species garden. Copies are available at the Doris Duke Center’s visitor information desk.

Stefan Bloodworth and Jason Holmes helped lead a tour of Wadaoke Mountain in South Carolina. This 3-day botanical field trip was the first of what will be a once a year tour of unique native plant habitats in the Southeast.

historic gardens

700 Chrysanthemums were planted in the Terraces for fall color. As recently as 10 years ago, more than 7,000 mums were planted for the fall.

More than 12,000 annuals, 8,500 bulbs and a good number of perennials were planted in the Terraces and surrounding planting beds. Salvias, ruellias and tropical bananas all did well this year.

A wide variety of tropical plants are being used more frequently in the warm months.

New plants were added to the President's Bridge area to complement the recycling waterfall.

The Hanes Iris Garden has been replanted with bearded iris. Plans call for more varieties than before, with new companion plants including yucca, pink muhli grass, cacti, and Jerusalem sage being installed.

william louis culberson asiatic arboretum

Construction of the Durham-Toyama Sister Cities Pavilion began in earnest, with an October dedication. Representatives from Japan and the local city and university community were scheduled to attend.

Paul Jones traveled to China to attend the Botanical Gardens Conservation International Global Congress. Theme of congress was Building a Sustainable Future: The Role of Botanical Gardens. Paul presented a paper titled Protecting Global Diversity at the Sarah P. Duke Gardens.

For the second consecutive year, two students from China participated in the Duke Gardens summer intern program. Yang Tingting and Hu Ji-anxiang interned from Xishuangbanna Tropical Botanical Garden in southern China.

The Daylily Garden Club provided the resources for informative signage to be developed to accompany the Daylily collection.

horticulture

For the second consecutive year, the Duke Gardens hosted an annual International Water Gardening Society waterlily competition. Waterlily breeders from around the world sent in hybrids for the competition in two categories: hardy and tropical. Kudos to staff member Tamara Kilbane and volunteer John Wyman for their professional management of this popular competition.

The Gardens summer-long exhibition at the U.S. Botanical Garden in Washington, DC proved to be popular for visitors, with more than 300,000 people viewing the exhibit. The Duke Gardens was one of 11 gardens from across the U.S. asked to participate.

A 44-foot long wooded bridge now connects the Page White Garden to the Spring Woodland Garden. The bridge, which features Duke stone on its columns and abutments, was donated in honor of Kay Bunting Randolph.

A plum-colored bluestone terrace is now installed in front of the Terrace Shop. Natural stone steps connect the gift shop to the lower parking lot.

volunteer program

The program marked its 15th anniversary. With some 300 volunteers, the program provides the equivalent of 6 full-time employees. Volunteers may now log in their hours electronically.

The Plant and Craft Festival celebrated its 25th anniversary and enjoyed its greatest revenue in history. The festival was expanded to include pre-sales for Friends of the Gardens.

The docent program trained volunteers for the Children's Education programs. Twelve new recruits were trained, including 6 retired teachers.

Chuck Hemric became the Chair of the Committee on Volunteerism with the American Public Garden Association.

A VERY GOOD MAN IN MIND WHO ABSORBED THE MEN I HAD TRAINED,
WHEN I GAVE UP CONTRACTING. A GARDEN EMBODYING ONLY PLANTS
WHICH ARE NATIVE TO THE STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA WOULD CER-TAINLY BE INSTRUCTIVE AS WELL AS BEAUTIFUL.

A CONFERENCE BETWEEN DR. HANES AND YOU AND I, IN POLICIES, METHODS AND FINANCIAL LIMITATIONS MAY WOULD CERTAINLY BE THE FIRST STEP IN CREATING AN LEDGE GARDEN WHICH WILL BE A CONSTANT SOURCE OF EDUCATION TO THE UNIVERSITY.

SINCERELY YOURS
